

ASCE Journal of Urban Planning and Development

Special Issue on Inclusive Urbanization and Participatory Urban Development

Guest editors:

Dr. Siu Wai Wong, The Hong Kong Polytechnic University (email: ivy.sw.wong@polyu.edu.hk)

Prof. Bo-sin Tang, The University of Hong Kong (email: bsbstang@hku.hk)

Prof. Jinlong Liu, Renmin University of China (email: liujinlong@ruc.edu.cn)

Prof. Danlin Yu, Montclair State University (email: yud@montclair.edu)

Call for Papers

Aim & Scope

We invite papers to examine how urban planning can enhance social inclusion, support community participation and strengthen public cohesion under the process of rapid urbanization in developing countries. We encourage papers aiming at theoretical reflections and/or empirical research on urban planning and development of rural or peri-urban areas under the pressure of urban restructuring and transformation. Topics may include original and novel studies about village revival/rehabilitation, institutional innovations, capacity building of new neighborhood, community planning and governance, reconstruction of local economy, heritage conservation, population migration and social integration. We particularly welcome studies that critically examine how urban planning strategy and urban management tools can address the challenges and impacts of urbanization on community development, welfare and resilience of the transitional urban neighborhood.

Submission Information

For full consideration, authors should submit an abstract of 1000 words by May 31, 2018 to the guest editor (email: ivy.sw.wong2018@gmail.com). Following the review of abstracts, selected authors must submit final papers through the journal's Editorial Manager website:

<http://www.editorialmanager.com/jrnupeng/> for initial evaluation by November 30, 2018.